Overview of the Special edition

This year marks the 10th Anniversary of ESJ. To celebrate this event, a special issue of the journal was commissioned by asking for contributions from academics, lecturers, researchers, scientists, practitioners, business people, and entrepreneurs. This special issue aims to provide ideas for the uncertainty and turmoil of the external environment, and the significant impact it has on business and society. Furthermore, the focus is to expand the understanding of the ways in which businesses, economies, government, and other institutions will respond to these challenges.

The coronavirus pandemic is a test for how society can thrive without growth. As economic growth stalls, businesses are beginning to forge a new social contract with society based on principles of sharing and distribution.

The new coronavirus economy is likely to reshape how we work and live. Humanity needs to enter the post-coronavirus era, not looking back to the way things were but pointed towards where we need to go.

The papers in this special issue would use a variety of research designs, e.g., quantitative, qualitative, and mixed methods. The suggested themes would include, but are not limited to, the following:

1. Economic and Financial Problems caused by covid19 (e.g. countries, tourism industries, SME)
2. Social problems, that tourism and pandemics have caused
3. Tourism restart opportunities
4. Pandemic as a challenge for tourism
5. Frameworks and plans for living with coronavirus and travelling with it
6. The importance of Tourism for different countries
